The Columbia Phants of yesterday says: We beg leave to call attention to the following extract from the letter of a citizen of Yorkville, addressed to a gentleman of this city. The writer is a gentleman of the highest character. His letter will give some idea of the scenes enacting in York. Nor will our readers fail to appreciate the indignant emotions evinced by the writer,

YORKVILLE, S. C., October 21, 1871.

Although I feel secure in my own innocence of any complicity in the causes which have been made the protext for the infamous proceedings inaugurated here by the party in power, yet I cannot but be shocked and feel uneasiness at the total overthrow of all my preconceptions of Republicanism, freedom and law. Indeed no stranger to our community could remain here unafof insecurity. Every bulwark of civil proby dicceses, whether the vote on the had attempted to implicate to prevent his Irgereal and Woodward asks for judgment for tection seems leveled, and personal liberty appears now to depend entirely upon the absence of malice on the part of the ignorant and deprayed.
